WELCOME TO METRO BOSTON

NIKKI M. MASCALL, REPORTER

Many of us can hardly wrap our heads around last week's school shooting in Parkland, Florida, the 18th of 2018, and kids likely have just as many questions and concerns. I spoke to Dr. Daniel Schechter, a child psychiatrist with NYU Langone Health in New York City, about the best way parents can discuss the tragedy and common red flags to watch out for after exposure to such violent events. TRUMP BACKS GUN BACKGROUND CHECKS

The White House said on Monday that President Donald Trump supports efforts to improve federal background checks for gun purchases, days after a shooting at a Florida school killed 17 people. Trump spoke to Sen. John Cornyn (R-Texas) on Friday about a bipartisan bill that he and Sen. Chris Murphy (D-CT) introduced to improve federal compliance with criminal background checks,

White House spokeswoman Sarah Sanders said. Students, many using the mantra Never Again, are mobilizing around the country in favor of stronger gun laws after the deadliest high school shooting in U.S. history took place on Wednesday at Florida's Marjory Stoneman Douglas High School, where a former student is accused of murdering 17 people using an assault-style rifle.

FLORIDA SHOOTING SUSPECT BACK IN COURT

The former student accused of last week's deadly shooting at a Florida high school returned to court for one of two hearings on Monday. Nikolas Cruz, his head bowed, hands shackled to his waist and wearing a red jail-issued jumpsuit, showed no emotion during the first procedural session in Fort Lauderdale. The hearing ended with Broward Circuit Court Judge Elizabeth Scherer ruling that a defense motion filed last week remain sealed. The content of the motion, sealed by another judge, was not described in the hearing. In the second hearing, the judge ordered the release of parts of a mental health assessment of Cruz by the Florida Department of Children and Families in November 2016. The report had already been leaked to a local newspaper. Cruz, who did not attend the second session, is facing 17 counts of premeditated murder.

TEENS FOR GUN REFORM HOLD PROTEST AT THE WHITE HOUSE

3 Demonstrators hold signs during a 'lie-in' demonstration supporting gun control reform near the White House on Tuesday, in Washington, DC. According to a statement from the White House, "the President is supportive of efforts to improve the Federal background check system," in the wake of last week's shooting at a high school in Parkland, Florida. For more, see page 4.

KREMLIN: US ELECTION CHARGES UNFOUNDED

4 The Kremlin said on Monday that U.S. charges against 13 Russians and several Russian companies accused of meddling in the 2016 U.S. presidential election campaign contained zero proof of Russian state involvement. The comments were the Kremlin's first reaction to charges drawn up by the office of U.S. Special Counsel Robert Mueller that centered on a Russian businessman Evgeny Prigozhin, dubbed "Putin's Cook" by Russian media, who U.S. officials say has extensive ties to the country's military and political establishment. The full indictment, released on Friday, said that a Russian propaganda arm funded by Prigozhin oversaw a criminal and espionage conspiracy to tamper in the 2016 U.S. presidential campaign to support Donald Trump and disparage Hillary Clinton.

CONGRESS EYES FEDERAL CRYPTOCURRENCY RULES

5 U.S. lawmakers are moving to consider new rules that could impose stricter federal oversight on the emerging asset class, several top lawmakers told Reuters. Bipartisan momentum is growing in the Senate and House of Representatives for action to address the risks posed by virtual currencies to investors and the financial system, they said. Even free-market Republican conservatives said regulation could be needed if cryptocurrencies threaten the U.S. economy. "There's no question about the fact that there is a need for a regulatory framework," said Sen. Mike Rounds (R-SD), a Banking Committee member. Digital assets currently fall into a jurisdictional gray area between the Securities and Exchange Commission, the Commodity Futures Trading Commission, the Treasury Department, the Federal Reserve and each state.

Would parents feel safer if their child attended a school with an armed guard?

How to talk to your kids about school shootings

"We can never say, 'It'll never happen,' which is the most painful part for parents," said Dr. Daniel Schecter of NYU Langone Health.

Talking about school shootings with emotions surfacing is fine because "we're human," Schecter said. ALL PHOTOS: GETTY IMAGES

While adults are reeling after last week's shooting at Marjory Stoneman Douglas High School left 17 dead in Parkland, Florida, children likely have their own questions.

Metro asked Dr. Daniel Schecter, director of stress, trauma and resilience in NYU Langone Health's department of child and adolescent psychiatry, for tips on how to talk about Parkland, the 18th school shooting of 2018.

"The way that parents talk to their children should always keep in mind where children are at in their development and emotional life," Schecter said.

Know you're ready
Before starting the conversation, "it's very important for parents to know they're ready to talk about these difficult things with their children," Schecter said.

Listen
Schecter urges parents to listen and watch the non-verbal cues children express, especially younger ones and teens who might not talk much.

He suggests, "Ask what they've seen or heard and what they're thinking about before ... a pre-planned discussion."

Emotions are OK
It may be hard for parents to talk about school shootings without emotions surfacing, and that's fine because "we're human, and we want to teach our kids to be human," Schecter said.

Know safety protocols
It's important for kids, especially those fearful of going to school in the wake of a shooting, to know their school's plans.

"We can never say, 'It'll never happen,' which is the most painful part for parents, but it was clear that in Florida some people were saved because of the drills," Schecter said.

Limit access to news
Younger kids may hear news coverage and become frightened, so Schecter proposes not speaking of tragic events in front of them.

He thinks "watching the news with kids is not a good idea until they're ... able to understand the complexity" of events.

Look for red flags
After exposure to violent events, parents may see behavioral changes such as "traumatic play," which processes violence by imitation.

He suggests counteracting it with toy police and judges "so we bring in help and create a solution because it's important to not leave that out."

Students demand gun control after mass shooting

Youth-organized protests started this weekend.

Stunned by the deadliest high school shooting in U.S. history, students mobilized on Sunday to organize support of stronger gun laws, challenging politicians they say have failed to protect them.

Students from Marjory Stoneman Douglas High School, where a former student is accused of murdering 17 people on Wednesday using an assault-style rifle, joined others on social media to plan the events.

"I felt like it was our time to take a stand," said

Lane Murdock, 15. "We're the ones in these schools, we're the ones who are having shooters come into our classrooms and our spaces."

Murdock, who lives 20 miles from Connecticut's

"We're the ones in these schools, we're the ones who are having shooters come into our classrooms and our spaces."

Lane Murdock, 15

Sandy Hook Elementary School where 20 children and six adults were shot to death five years ago, drew more than 50,000 signatures on an online petition calling for students to walk out of high schools on April 20, the 19th anniversary of the mass shooting at Columbine High School in Colorado.

Students from the Florida high school are planning a "March for Our Lives" in D.C. on March 24 for school safety and to ask lawmakers to enact gun control.

They also plan to rally for gun control, mental health issues and school safety on Wednesday in the state capital. The students expect to meet with a lawmaker seeking to ban the sale of weapons like the AR-15 allegedly used in the shooting.

The White House is planning "a listening session" with high school students and teachers Wednesday but did not specify who would be involved.

Democratic leaders vowed to fight the gun lobby to reduce firearm violence.

"We're the adults. We're the leaders in this country who are supposed to keep our children safe — and again and again, our country has let them down," DNC chairman Tom Perez tweeted. REUTERS

Canned dog food recalled for possible euthanasia drug contamination

Low levels of pentobarbital, a drug used to euthanize animals, have been found in certain canned dog foods like Kibbles 'N Bits, the FDA said.

KRISTIN TOUSSAINT
kristin.toussaint@metro.us

Several kinds of canned dog food are being recalled for containing a drug used to euthanize animals.

The J.M. Smucker Company said it is recalling certain products, including Kibbles 'N Bits and Gravy Train cans, for positive results of pentobarbital.

Pentobarbital is most commonly used in animals as a sedative, anesthetic or for euthanasia.

The low levels of pentobarbital present are unlikely to cause any health risk to pets, the Food and Drug Administration said in a statement.

Still, the administration said, "any detection of pentobarbital in pet food is a violation of the Federal Food, Drug, and Cosmetic Act — simply put, pentobarbital should not be in pet food."

Pets that eat food containing the drug can experience "drowsiness, dizziness, excitement, loss of balance, nausea, nystagmus (eyes moving back and forth in a jerky manner) and inability to stand," the FDA warns.

The J.M. Smucker Company initiated the product withdrawal, saying in a statement that the specific shipments of Gravy Train, Kibbles 'N Bits, Ol' Roy and Skippy canned dog food "do not meet its quality specifications due to the presence of extremely low levels of pentobarbital."

"We take this very seriously and are extremely disappointed that pentobarbital was introduced to our supply chain," said Barry Dunaway, president of Smucker's Pet Food and Pet Snacks, in a statement. "We will continue to work closely with our suppliers and veterinarians to ensure the ingredients used in our products meet or exceed regulatory safety standards and our high-quality standards. Above all, we are a company that loves pets and understand the responsibility we have in providing high-quality food for the pets our consumers love."

Pet owners should remove contaminated products from their homes, the FDA advised, and can contact the Smucker Company at 800-828-9980 or by email.

Doctors at the Angell Animal Medical Center in Boston advise pet owners to avoid the affected brands, said Rob Halpin of the MSPCA, warning about pet nutrition.

"These are always scary moments," Halpin said. "The doctors are concerned that more pet owners will turn to home-made food, which can be fine but only if the specific nutritional needs of dogs and cats are met — and most commercial foods meet those needs well."

TRUMP'S AMERICA

DO WE HAVE TO CELEBRATE EVERY PRESIDENT?

Hope you had a nice Presidents* Day.

Sorry about the asterisk, but I'm afraid we kinda need it. As you might have heard, things are getting a little sordid around the White House.

No dis on George Washington, Abraham Lincoln or even Millard Fillmore. All past presidents have had their imperfections. But from 1 to 44, every last one at least tried to do what was best for the country he was sworn to serve. What began in 1885 as a national celebration of Washington's birthday morphed in the early 1970s into an all-inclusive Presidents Day on the third Monday in February.

But who's feeling like celebrating this year? Did you hear anyone on Monday say out loud: "I sure am proud of the president we have now"?

Seriously, anyone?

We've certainly had our share of un-presidential presidents. Bill Clinton bobbed and weaved through Ken Starr's Monica torture. Richard Nixon got drunk and paranoid as Watergate closed in. But neither of those two acted like he was more important than the office. No one else has dragged us to where we find ourselves now.

All that matters to Trump is Trump, and he keeps proving it.

Spending the holiday weekend in another frantic tweet-storm. Being hit by two new sex-and-money scandals, this time involving a porn star and a former Playboy Playmate.

trying to hijack the 2016 presidential campaign, the one that installed Donald Trump as president.

Blaming Democrats, blaming Barack Obama, blaming the FBI — then adding, "but wasn't I a great candidate?" Somewhere, a 400-pound computer genius is sitting on his bed and issuing a great sigh of relief.

As Mueller's investigation moves methodically closer to the Oval Office, Trump appears more agitated than ever before. His attacks keep growing harsher. His repetitions — "no collusion! no collusion! no collusion!" — keep sounding more obsessed. His understanding of what it means to be president keeps getting further and further from the ways his many predecessors saw the job.

Happy Presidents* Day.

Here's hoping we all get to celebrate again before too long.

The underdog sports movie goes B.C.

"Early Man" pits the ancients against one another in history's first high stakes soccer game.

GREGORY WAKEMAN
Gregory.Wakeman@metro.us

It only takes a single drawing to spark the imagination of legendary stop motion director Nick Park and the Aardman Animation team, and that's how "Early Man" began back in 2010. Park was absentmindedly sketching a "caveman wielding a club, and hitting a rock," and before he knew it the foundation for a film about our knuckle-dragging ancestors inventing the sport of soccer was born.

"You're looking for an idea that has legs," Park tells Metro, "and I wanted to tap into the tribal nature of the game. That seemed to suit primitive man. So, I started to develop it into 'what if these idiotic — but lovable — cavemen had to learn a game where they couldn't use weapons or fists but had to use their feet instead?'"

Eight years later we've got "Early Man," which revolves around a tribe from the Stone Age going up against an army from the Bronze Age in a soccer match that decides the former's fate and home.

Because of Aardman Animation's storied past, Park had no shortage of actors lining up to star in the film. Eddie Redmayne and Tom Hiddleston quickly signed on, as did "Game Of Thrones" veteran Maisie Williams (who you may no better as Arya Stark of Winterfell).

One might think that portraying a bloodthirsty, solitary warrior with a kill list would prove more difficult than voicing a stop-motion character, but Williams found the opposite to be true.

"As an actor I use my body language and facial expressions a lot," she tells us. "So when that's stripped away it becomes very challenging."

But Williams actively seeks such challenges.

"I'm always looking to have fun in my roles," she shares. "The things I want to do are often something I haven't done before, and working with people that I've never really worked with. Doing a kid's animation film was wonderful, and I was able to learn a whole new different set of skills."

Dug, Hognob and Goona in Early Man
AARDMAN ANIMATION

Maisie Williams
GETTY IMAGES

Meanwhile, Park was still busy sculpting "Early Man" into his vision, a process that saw him take inspiration from a series of random films, and even invent a new genre.

"'Gladiator' inspired me very much," says Park. "I wanted to portray a football game with all the drama and cinematicness of 'Gladiator.' I also thought I'd never seen a prehistoric underdog sports movie before. So I invented the genre!"

Any other Easter eggs to keep an eye out for?

"There's a reference to 'Three Amigos,'" he reveals, "when the cavemen are going hunting and using animal noises." We also caught a tribute to "Die Hard," among others.

"Early Man" is now in theaters.

Thomas Lennon on the legacy of National Lampoon

The actor was in town for a screening of "A Futile and Stupid Gesture."

matthew.juul@metro.us

Few publications have left as big of an impact on the comedy landscape as National Lampoon.

A spinoff of the storied Harvard Lampoon, the magazine became a cult hit in the late '70s for its subversive and often shocking style of humor. While National Lampoon helped launch the careers of stars like Bill Murray and spawned numerous books, films and other productions, many longtime comedy fans still have a special place in their hearts for the beloved magazine, which shuttered in 1998.

The wild beginnings and eventual fall of the publication are chronicled in the Netflix movie "A Futile and Stupid Gesture," a biopic about Harvard alum and National Lampoon co-founder Doug Kenney. Based on the book of the same name, the film stars Will Forte as the eccentric late writer, who died in 1980.

Thomas Lennon, who plays fan-favorite Lampoon contributor Michael O'Donoghue, tells Metro that the magazine became popular because it provided readers with humorous material they could pass along to their pals, similar to how today's comedy fans share clips with each other on social media.

"It was the analog version of forwarding a funny video to your friend," Lennon says.

The former "Reno 911!" star was in Cambridge on Saturday to present a screening of "A Futile and Stupid Gesture." Lennon was joined by screenwriters John Aboud and Michael Colton, as well as producer and Netflix's chief content officer, Ted Sarandos, who was also named an honorary member of the Harvard Lampoon during a special ceremony.

Lennon praises Sarandos for being a true "fan boy" of comedy who was willing to take a chance on the quirky film.

"His name looms very large in show business these days," Lennon says. "He is one of the most down-to-earth, genuinely funny comedy fans that you could meet."

"The traditional studios probably would not have made a movie like this in this era," he adds. "It doesn't feature superheroes. It's not a $200 million venture. It's a funny, sad biopic about a fascinating figure."

The actor admits that "A Futile and Stupid Gesture" is something of an oddball film, particularly when it comes to the casting choices, such as Joel McHale playing Chevy Chase. Although the production had "a lot of weird layers to it," somehow, everything came together.

"It was insane," Lennon says. "I've met Chevy and I've met Joel, and of course you watch the film and it's really, I think, the most sublime performance in the entire film."

As for Lennon, he takes on the role of O'Donoghue, who's best known as the first head writer of "Saturday Night Live." The late scribe had a penchant for smashing things and making people angry, but was able to connect with readers through his very dark humor. Although he was one of the few Lampoon writers who didn't hail from Harvard, O'Donoghue fit right in with the magazine's provocateur nature.

While Lennon admits that many of the decades-old articles aren't as funny when you look back on them now, the actor believes comedy lost a part of its soul when the Lampoon stopped publishing.

"'Woke' would not be the word to describe those old articles," he says. "That said, it's sad to lose something that was getting people a little bit riled up."

Luke Pell dishes on 'Winter Games,'

The former "Bachelorette" star opens up about the new series.

matthew.juul@metro.us

Luke Pell has finally returned to the world of "The Bachelor" with the franchise's "Winter Games" series. While the fan-favorite contestant got caught up in a bit of off-screen drama following his stint on "The Bachelorette," the Nashville singer-songwriter tells Metro he couldn't be happier to be back for the new show. During his recent trip to Boston for a watch party at Hurricane's at the Garden, we caught up with Pell to talk about filming "Winter Games" in New England, his future with "The Bachelor" and more.

Were you excited to

take a trip to snowy New England for "Winter Games?"

We showed up and started filming like the first of December. They literally hadn't had any snow. There's a ski resort up there, I guess it's called Mount Snow, but there was no snow. They didn't even have cold enough weather to blow snow. We were there for like two days and all of a sudden it just came, their first snow of the year. It was blowing sideways for the rest of the time that we were there. It turned out to be a lot of snow.

Would you have preferred a "Bachelor in Paradise"-style beach instead?

The snowy mountains and the log cabin is not a bad situation, but I'm more of a beach guy. I love the sand I love the palm trees. I'll never complain in that situation, but you know what, we'll see what happens. One of these days, maybe we'll end up down there.

Fans can get pretty obsessed over contestants' love lives, on and off screen. Were you surprised by that following your stint on "The Bachelorette?"

The cool part that's made this successful as long as it's been running, and keeps it going every year, is that it gives these fans somebody to vicariously live through. The audience, right wrong or indifferent of what they see on screen, they still see people and they still see a relationship and a dynamic that they want to feel a part of. They feel this intrinsic need to be responsible for how that person's feeling or to give their opinion of how these people's feelings should be. That's what's so interesting about it. I mean, we Americans love to gossip about who's who, they do it every day with their neighbors or whoever's in the next cubicle over at work, Johnny's hooking up with Sally or whatever. This is the same thing for them, but everybody is seeing all this unfold in front of their eyes, so they all have this common thing that the can all talk about, the same storyline in the elevator or whatever. That's what's really cool about it, you can go to the office, you can be on a flight and be like, "Oh, you watch that show too?" and jump right into the drama. It's funny how addicted Americans are to that drama, but they love it.

The downside of it, the other side of the sword, is that they continue to be in those people's personal lives long after they're on the show and outside the confines of a TV scenario. I think the cast members have to be OK with that because that's a reality that continues, that the public stays in their life, especially with social media, and it makes it easy for people to be followed on a daily basis.

There was a lot of drama around you possibly leading a season of "The Bachelor." Did all that make you hesitant at all to sign up for "Winter Games?"

I started learning after my time on the show how involved the public is in my personal life. That bridge was already crossed, and so I realized that was going to continue happening either way. I learned a little bit about just being careful about who I'm associated with, who's in my personal life and who I can trust. But at the same time, I still wanted to be an open book and I knew that I had already opened the door to the world seeing into my life anyway. There wasn't any way to reverse that, so I was like, you know what, I'll just lean into it and just continue to show them whatever they want to see about my personal life. Here it is, here's me, and just be completely transparent with the person that I am. It feels good to be OK with that and not have to fight the, "Oh, I want to keep my personal life personal," and that whole thing. It's just like, "Hey, here it is, judge me for whatever you will," and I'm good with that. I am myself.

"Winter Games" airs Tuesdays and Thursdays at 8 p.m. on ABC. GETTY IMAGES

Are you down to come back for a future "Bachelor" series? I guess it's like expectation management, right? You can look forward and make plans and think a year down the road and what's your life is going to be like, where you're going to be, and you're probably going to be wrong. For me, I learned to dial that back and just make one decision at a time and to take them as they come. I don't know where I'll be in a year. If a year comes down the road and there's an opportunity at that point,

I'll make that decision, but right now, I'm living everyday just where it's at and just for that day and not trying to think too hard or plan too hard of my expectations or where I might be [with relationships] or even professionally at that point. It's a little bit easier to process that way. We'll see what happens.

Could be your thyroid

The thyroid functions as the conductor of important systems in the body, from metabolism to menstruation. ISTOCK

Here's how to know if you have a thyroid problem and how to get treatment.

KATE MOONEY
kate.mooney@metro.us

You've probably heard of the thyroid, but it's less likely that you know what it is or how it actually functions in the body. The 2-inch, butterfly-shaped gland, located in the neck just below the Adam's apple, secretes hormones that help regulate important systems in the body, including temperature, metabolism, heart rate and menstruation.

When too much or too little of these hormones are produced, several bodily functions can get out of whack. We asked endocrinologist Dr. Bryan McIver to talk us through common thyroid disorders and signs you might be suffering from them.

Who is likely to develop a thyroid disorder?

According to the American Thyroid Association,

20 million Americans have thyroid disease, although women are five to eight times more likely to suffer from it than men. Typically, it affects women in their mid-thirties to mid-sixties who have a family history of thyroid problems — although the disorder isn't strictly genetic.

Hyperthyroidism, or overactive thyroid

"When there's too much thyroid hormone, it's like a conductor has gone a little crazy, and the whole music goes into dissonance," McIver explains, describing the condition of hyperthyroidism. This can cause rapid heartbeat, restlessness, difficulty focusing, an overactive bowel — symptoms akin to how you feel if you've had too much coffee.

Hypothyroidism, or underactive thyroid

The most common thyroid condition, hypothyroidism, occurs when the thyroid isn't producing enough hormones. This can cause patients to feel lethargic, depressed, experience constipation and rapid weight gain. It can also interfere with the menstrual cycle, which can cause issues with infertility. If you're having trouble getting pregnant, you might consider getting your thyroid tested to see if that's the culprit, says McIver.

Nodular thyroid disease

Nodules on or inside the thyroid are actually very common — occurring in half of women over the age of 50, McIver explains. Depending on the size of the nodule, you can feel it or even see it protruding from your neck. As it grows, it can lead you to develop a raspy voice or have difficulty swallowing. Luckily, the majority are benign, but on occasion they are cancerous.

Diagnosis and treatment

If you're experiencing any of the aforementioned symptoms, let your doctor know, McIver recommends. They can refer you to an endocrinologist who can diagnose the condition by testing the levels of the thyroid stimulating hormone (TSH) through a simple blood test.

Hypothyroidism is treated with thyroid hormone replacement therapy; hyperthyroidism, with medications that help slow down the thyroid, or via removal of the thyroid through radioactive iodine or surgery.

A doctor can diagnose thyroid nodules with an ultrasound or genetic testing and then biopsy it. According to McIver, thyroid cancer has a very good prognosis.

Report: Sox finally sign Martinez

After three months of talks, the slugger is finally bound for Boston.

MATT BURKE
sports@metro.us

The Red Sox have signed free agent J.D. Martinez despite all the noise in the past few weeks that Martinez and his camp were "fed up" with Boston.

Late Monday afternoon, ESPN's Pedro Gomez tweeted, "It's done. J.D. Martinez is a Red Sox," and later: "It's a five year deal and Martinez can opt out after two years. FanRag-Sports' Jon Heyman and ESPN's Buster Olney had also reported earlier in the day that the two sides were extremely close to a deal.

Martinez had been the most coveted bat on the MLB free agent market this offseason and fits perfectly within the Red Sox' 2018 plans, giving them tremendous flexibility. Martinez can play first base, he can play the outfield and he can DH.

There had been some chatter in recent days that the Yankees, of all teams, could swoop in and stick it to the Red Sox one more time by inking Martinez. But New York is not of the mindset in signing long-term deals for big bucks right now ... unless it's a slam-dunk player like Giancarlo Stanton. Martinez is 30 years old and is seeking a six-year deal.

The Yankees seemingly learned their lesson, as they have had buyers remorse with Jacoby Ellsbury for several years now. Ironically the Yankees would have to shed Ellsbury's salary if they are to make a play for Martinez, and dumping Ellsbury on another team is easier said than done.

Arizona had been looking to re-sign Martinez but he got much too pricey. The Diamondbacks just could not compete with Boston in the financial department. Martinez's agent, Scott Boras, has met with Diamondbacks owner Ken Kendrick twice in the past month, but that appeared to simply be posturing on Boras' part.

From arizonasports.com last month:

"The market hasn't come close to matching [the initial price range of $200 million] but the Red Sox' offer of more than $100 million over five years is well above what the D-Backs can offer, assuming they don't make any significant deals to free up spending money."

Another Boras client, Eric Hosmer, signed an eight-year, $144 million deal with the Padres this past weekend — which led to immediate speculation that a Martinez deal could be coming quick.

Martinez has hit above .300 the past two seasons and clocked a career-best 45 homers (in Detroit and Arizona) last season alone. He has hit at least 22 homers per year since 2014.

Martinez figures to be the Red Sox' cleanup hitter in 2018. Here's a look at the Sox' projected opening day lineup:

1. Mookie Betts, RF
2. A. Benintendi, LF
3. Xander Bogaerts, SS
4. JD Martinez, DH
5. Hanley Ramirez, 1B
6. Rafael Devers, 3B
7. Christian Vazquez, C
8. Jackie Bradley Jr., CF
9. Eduardo Nunez, 2B

What to watch at the Winter Olympics tonight

ALPINE SKIING WOMEN'S DOWNHILL FINAL

Due to the inclement weather South Korea has thrown at Olympians this month, United States star Mikaela Shiffrin was forced to withdraw due to a tightly-compact schedule.

Luckily for Team USA, LINDSEY VONN is still in the mix as the veteran continues her redemption tour after injury troubles.

FREESTYLE SKIING MEN'S SKICROSS

While the United States has no representation in the competition, there are a pair of Canadians looking to strike gold.

In each of the last two Olympics, BRADY LEMAN and CHRIS DEL BOSCO made the finals, but missed out on gold. They'll be strong contenders on Tuesday night to find their way on the podium.

MEN'S HOCKEY QUARTERFINALS

The Czech Republic clinched an automatic berth to the quarterfinals after three-straight wins in Group A action over South Korea, Canada and Switzerland.

They'll meet the winner of the struggling United States and Slovakia, who play their knockout tilt late Monday night.

JOE PANTORNO

TAKE A KNEE

We have a new "worst national anthem" of all-time candidate thanks to Fergie's dreadful performance on Sunday night at the NBA All-Star Game in Los Angeles. Fergie was looking for a "sultry" version of the anthem, but it wound up sounding like something you would hear right before the tip of a middle school basketball game in Maine.

Everyone on Twitter had a joke regarding Fergie's abomination, including nearly a million versions of "Fergie's national anthem was so bad even Trump took a knee."

ESPN's Darren Rovell even made a funny: "Everyone else has been offended [in the United States in this day and age]. Why not go for Francis Scott Key?"

BELICHICK LOYALTY

Marquis Flowers has been the most loyal Patriots player toward Bill Belichick this offseason as he's gotten into Twitter battles with Boston media members regarding Belichick's benching of Malcolm Butler. "So you got all the answers. Coach Belichick has been to more Super Bowls than you've been with women!" Flowers tweeted to The Boston Sports Journal's Greg Bedard.

Devin McCourty is the second most loyal as he is sticking with Belichick's story regarding Butler's benching in that it was 100 percent "game plan" and "strategy."

"We all knew [Butler] wasn't starting all week. That wasn't a secret to the guys on the team," McCourty told NJ.com.

THE NEXT JIMMY G

In Metro's most recent NFL Mock Draft, we had the Pats selecting Richmond QB Kyle Lauletta with the 95th overall pick. It is, after all, very likely that the Pats will look to get a rookie quarterback this offseason in an attempt to find Jimmy Garoppolo 2.0.

ESPN's draft guru Todd McShay agrees with us on Lauletta and also says the Pats could have their eyes on QB Luke Falk of Washington State.

"Highly driven, very intelligent and accurate passers who both lived in the pocket and are very good at going through their progressions," McShay said of the two, via the MMQB's Peter King. "Lauletta has a slightly bigger arm and he was impressive in how he carried himself at the Senior Bowl."

Vitamin B1 (Thiamine) After Cardiac Arrest Study

Learn about this post cardiac arrest study that may affect you or someone you know.

Cardiac arrest is an emergency condition in which your heart and breathing stop, requiring cardiopulmonary resuscitation (CPR) to restart the heart. Sudden cardiac arrest affects approximately 300,000 people annually in the U.S.

Thiamine After Cardiac Arrest (THACA) is an emergency medicine research study designed to determine if Vitamin B1 (Thiamine) can improve survival and prevent brain injury in patients who have had a cardiac arrest. There are currently no medications known to have a beneficial effect on post-arrest outcome, and brain injury and death are very common. Vitamin B1 deficiency is not uncommon after cardiac arrest, and deficiency is known to cause brain injury in other settings. This research study is taking place at Beth Israel Deaconess Medical Center and will last for approximately 4-5 years. Participants who are brought to the hospital after a cardiac arrest and are enrolled in this study will be randomly assigned to receive Vitamin B1 or placebo (no active medication) for two days after suffering a cardiac arrest.

Because of the importance of administering Vitamin B1 (Thiamine) as soon as possible after cardiac arrest in order to maximize the chance of finding a benefit, this study will be conducted under exception from informed consent (EFIC) in accordance with the federal Food and Drug Administration (FDA) regulations. EFIC is allowed only when testing possible treatments for life-threatening conditions for which there is no alternative proven treatment, when obtaining consent is not possible because the study treatment must be administered quickly and a legally authorized representative of the patient is not present or reachable.

When legally authorized representatives are available to provide consent, research staff will obtain consent prior to enrollment. For participants enrolled under EFIC, they or their representatives will be notified of enrollment as soon as possible and asked if they would like to continue participation, with the option to withdraw from the study at any time.

The purpose of this handout is to notify our community about this study and to provide contact information and resources where you can learn more. If you do not wish to be a participant in this study, please visit the website below or call the number listed below to find out how you can opt out. Individuals who opt out will be sent a bracelet and the study team will maintain a list of these individuals to ensure they are not enrolled under EFIC.

Aries Instability will keep you on your toes. Whether it's you showing emotional tendencies or someone else, you'll find it difficult to move forward without revising your plans.

Taurus Check to see who is and isn't on your side. Know your allies, but understand your opponents. Having a broad understanding of your situation will help you find a solution.

Gemini Stay ahead of the competition. In both your personal and professional endeavors, you outmaneuver anyone who opposes you. Don't discuss personal matters openly.

Cancer Don't jump into something because someone applies pressure. It's OK to be different, because it will encourage you to build greater confidence and strength.

Leo Don't do anything blindfolded when it comes to your personal or professional status. Get all the facts and figures, and know what you want and what you are getting into.

Virgo A business trip, meeting or educational pursuits are highlighted. You'll be offered a lot of information. Take notes to avoid confusion. Personal disruptions will cloud your mind.

Libra Iron out any kinks when it comes to home improvements or personal relationships. Fewer demands and more compromises will help bring you closer to an agreement.

Scorpio Use your charm to convince others to join you in whatever you pursue. Your enthusiasm and innovative way of presenting your capabilities will encourage long-term success.

Sagittarius Opposition will change the way you think and act. Question what's being said and respond accordingly, but don't lose sight of what it is you really want to see unfold.

Capricorn A change of plans will take you by surprise. Don't leave details unattended to if you want to avoid unexpected twists of fate. Trust your intuition, not what others say.

Aquarius Change can be good, as long as you are reasonable and don't overdo, overspend or overreact. Know what you want and only spend what you have.

Pisces Know your limitations and concentrate on your strengths. Chances to excel are in reach if you can curb emotions and temper. Gravitate toward those willing to help. EUGENIA
